

Informative Sites You Should Know About
By Jamie Leben
February 12, 2011

Twit network: <http://www.twit.tv/>

- What: Streaming netcast (video and audio) on tech subjects
- Founded by Leo Laporte, many other ex-tech TV folks show up
- Impressive use of inexpensive technologies- webcams, Skype, streaming media services
- They have a Roku channel

Free online educations

- Khan Academy <http://www.khanacademy.org/>
- What: free 501(c)(3) online educational video on math, science, physics, history, economics
- Founded by Salman Khan
- Mission “providing a high quality education to anyone, anywhere”
- Starts with very basics; goes all the way through advanced subjects—informal, humorous, fun
- 2000+ video, 8-15 minutes each, some exercises afterward
- First recipient of Google Project 10¹⁰⁰ award
- Bill Gates watches with his kids
- Great options to ensure you, children, grandchildren get a good, free general education

MIT OpenCourseWare

- Website: <http://ocw.mit.edu/index.htm>
- What: free online MIT classes- lecture notes, exams and videos of MIT classes